How the colors work together

A few rules that keep everything looking like one brand.

Pairings

White text on Velvet Plum. The standard button and the footer bands.

Midnight Navy text on Plum Mist. Tinted sections and cards.

Velvet Plum headings on white. Cards and the header bar.

White on Deep Plum. Hover states and the darkest accents.

Soft Orchid on white, for ornaments only, never for words people need to read.

Do

- Use Velvet Plum as the one strong color. Everything else is a tint, a neutral, or a small accent.
- Keep Leaf Green and Brushed Gold small: a word, an icon, a rule. Gold goes on navy or plum, never on white or ivory.
- Keep text Midnight Navy on light backgrounds and white on plum. Both pass accessibility contrast checks.
- Give the logo room: ivory or white behind it, never a busy photo.
- For print, hand the printer the HEX and CMYK values and ask for a proof. The CMYK figures here are conversions, not press-matched.

Don't

- Don't reintroduce the old pink, periwinkle or bright teal alongside the plum. The heritage butterfly is the one exception and it lives only on the 20-years banner.
- Don't put Soft Orchid or Plum Mist text on ivory. Too little contrast.
- Don't use black. Midnight Navy is the dark.
